

European Statistical Meeting Health Technology Assessment

Tuesday 4th June 2013, Basel

Health Technology Assessment (HTA) studies the medical, social, ethical and economic implications of a health technology to a health care system, and today it is increasingly critical for manufacturers to provide additional evidence apart from that which is mandated by regulators.

This seminar will invite representatives with strong statistical backgrounds from academia, HTA bodies/regulators and industry working closely in this area. They will highlight, together with case studies, some of the key challenges in performing proper HTA research as well as where statisticians and others working in this field should be involved in helping to provide analytical and methodological leadership when establishing the evidence base that will meet the needs of both regulators and payers.

8:30am to 5:30pm
